As a parent, I would like to be able to block certain sites after school hours from 2:30pm to 6am, or would like to password protect them so my student must request my help when trying to access unblocked pages. On personal devices, this is possible so I would like to be able to do the same with these.

I was helping my child with homework. We completed 24 problems. We clicked on "save and close". When we reopened the assignment it only saved up to problem number 5. Should this happen again, is there something we can do?

Are the school books on the Chromebook or do they have separate books in order to study?

N/A

I have a family member that is knowledgeable in technology, that will help us.

I used to utilize textbooks for directions and samples of work to refer to. Can we get that through the Chromebook so that I can know the information the teacher covered in class?

Why didn't you publicise the insurance options and cost for replacement in case of damages

I am concerned that teachers feel so much pressure to use Chrome books that they are not teaching and interacting with students. Students are just being given information via the Chromebook to copy into notes and discussion of material isn't happening. Teens and others already have a lot of screen time. I hope they aren't getting too much now at school, too.
